WASHINGTON.

Dedication of the Monument Bearing his Name.

THE CEREMONIES AT ITS BASE.

An Imposing Pageant then Marches to the Capitol, where Appropriate Addresses and Responses are Delivered.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—About 800 people gathered in the temporary seats at the base of the Washington monument to-day, to listen to the formal ceremonies attending its dedication and delivery to the nation by the monument association. The day was very cold and raw, and the spectators sat with their hats on and coat collars turned up.

The proceedings were opened with music by the Marine band, the military standing at a rest, and the audience taking all opportunities to stamp, in order to restore circulation to their feet.

Masonic ceremonies by the Masonic grand lodge of the district of Columbia were conducted under direction of Grand Master Myron Wheeler, in which certain historic relics with which General Washington was intimately connected, were brought into use. The gavel used was one prepared and used by General Washington as grand master pro tem in laying the corner stone of the national capitol, the 18th of September, 1793. A sacred volume belonging to Fredericksburg lodge No. 4 of Virginia, upon which Washington took the first vows of masonry; that belonging to St. John's lodge No. 1, city of New York, upon which, on the 30th of April 1789, he took the oath of office as first president of the United States, the great light belonging to Alexandria-Washington lodge No. 22, Alexandria, Virginia, upon which he as worshipful master received the vows of initiates, the apron worn by him, which was worked by Madame Lafayette, a golden urn containing a lock of his hair, belonging to the grand lodge of Massachusetts, the lesser light, and one of the three sperm candles borne in Washington's funeral procession were exhibited.

Senator Sherman and W. W. Corcoran delivered suitable addresses, and then Colonel Thomas L. Casey, of the engineers, in appropriate words delivered the monument to the president of the United States.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR'S RESPONSE.

President Arthur, in accepting the monument, said: "Fellow Countrymen: Before the dawn of the century whose eventful years will soon have faded into the past, when death had but lately robbed this republic of its most beloved and illustrious citizen, the congress of the United States pledged the faith of the nation that in this city, bearing his honored name, and then as now, the seat of general government, a monument should be erected to commemorate the great events of his military and political life. The stately column that stretches heavenward from the plain whereon we stand bears witness to all who behold it that the covenant which our fathers made, their children have fulfilled. In the completion of this great work of patriotic endeavor there is abundant cause for national rejoicing, for while this structure shall endure it shall be to all mankind a steadfast token of the affectionate and reverent regard in which this people continue to hold the memory of Washington. Well may he ever keep a foremost place in the hearts of his countrymen. The faith that never faltered, the wisdom broader and deeper than any learning taught in schools, the courage that shrank from no peril and was dismayed by no defeat, the loyalty that kept all selfish purpose subordinate to the demands of patriotism and honor, the sagacity that displayed itself in camp and cabinet alike, and above all that harmonious union of moral and intellectual qualities which has never found its parallel among men—these are the attributes of character which the intelligent thought of this century ascribes to the grandest figure of the past. But other and more eloquent lips than mine will to-day rehearse to you the story of his noble life and its glorious achievements. To myself has been assigned a simpler duty, in the fulfillment of which I do now, as president of the United States and in behalf of the people, receive this monument from the hands of its builder and declare it dedicated from this time forth to the immortal name and memory of George Washington."

The president read his address in a firm and clear tone, and at its conclusion cheers broke forth that were hearty and prolonged.

THE MARCH TO THE CAPITOL.

Upon a signal from the chairman the assemblage broke into cheers, the military wheeled into line, civic bodies and distinguished persons engaged in the proceedings of the day sought their carriages and the procession, under the marshalship of General Sheridan, took up the line of march to the capitol. Pennsylvania avenue presented a brilliant scene during the progress of the pageant. Thousands of people thronged the sidewalks and occupied grand stands erected on all reservations along the line of march. Many buildings were handsomely decorated with flags and bunting.

About half-past 12 o'clock the procession turned the corner of Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue and entered on the magnificent broad and straight course of a mile to the western boundary of the capitol grounds.

THE PROCESSION.

First in order came General Sheridan, by his chief of staff, Brigadier-General Albert Ordway, United States volunteers and twenty-four aides de camp, in showy army uniforms; also a body representing the states and territories, among them the following from the Pacific coast: California, Thomas C. Quantrell; Nevada, Hon. John H. Kincaid; Oregon, E. L. Applegate; Arizona, Hon. J. W. Eddy; Idaho, Major William Hyndman; Montana, Hon. Martin Maginnis; New Mexico, Hon. F. A. Manzanares; Utah, Humphreys McMaster; Washington territory, Hon. O. C. Voorhees. Next in order came the first troop of Philadelphia cavalry, organized in 1774, Captain E. Burd Grubb commanding, which was assigned to duty as escort to the marshal of the day; United States marine corps, the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts, organized in 1638.

This attracted marked attention. Connecticut foot guards organized in 1771; German fusileers of Charleston, South Carolina, organized in 1775; Richmond light infantry blues organized in 1793.

Then came various other military organizations, Masonic bodies, the president and his cabinet, the diplomatic corps, members of the judiciary, visiting governors and their staffs, members of congress, officers of the army and navy, Grand Army of the Republic, civic organizations, participants in laying the corner-stone monument, etc.

The president was frequently cheered along the route. He rode in an open barouche with Secretary Frelinghuysen.

The procession was reviewed by the president from the east front of the capitol. The review continued until 2 o'clock, when the president and cabinet repaired to the president's room in the capitol, where they took lunch, before proceeding to the hall of the house of representatives.

AT THE CAPITOL.

At 2:10 the National Washington Monument association entered the hall of the house of representatives, which had been closely seated with chairs, by removal of the members desks, and appropriately decorated. The association marched in and took seats assigned it in front, and a little to the left of the speaker's desk. Shortly afterward General Sherman and staff entered, amid loud clapping of hands. The president and his cabinet next appeared, and the large assemblage rose and heartily applauded as the chief executive and his advisors passed down the main aisle and were assigned seats in the space directly in front of the speaker's desk. The supreme court, the judiciary of the district and the diplomatic corps followed the presidential party.

At 2:20 the senate, preceded by its officers, was escorted to the space reserved for it. Its presiding officer, Edmunds, proceeded to the speaker's desk, where the gavel was courteously handed him by Speaker Carlisle.

In calling the assembly to order Edmunds made a few appropriate remarks. Prayer was then offered by Rev. S. A. Wallis of Pohick church, near Mt. Vernon, Va.

WINTHROP'S ADDRESS.

The Marine band played "Hail Columbia," and then Edmunds, expressing his regret that Mr. Winthrop was necessarily absent, introduced Representative John D. Long of Massachusetts, who proceeded to read Winthrop's oration, the peroration to which was as follows:

No distinction of party or of section prevents our all feeling alike, that our country, by whomsoever governed, is still and always our country, to be cherished in all our hearts, and to be upheld and defended by all our hands. Most happy would it be if the 30th of April on which the first inauguration of Washington took place, in 1789, could henceforth be the date of all future inaugurations, as it might be by a slight amendment of the constitution, giving, as it would, a much needed extension to the short sessions of congress and letting the second century of our constitutional history begin where the first century began. But let the date be what it may, the inspiration of the centennial anniversary of that first great inaugural must not be lost upon us. Would that any words of mine could help us all, old and young, to resolve that the principles and character, and the examples of Washington, as he came forward to take the oath of office, on that day, shall once more be recognized and reverenced as the model for all who succeed him, and that his disinterested purity and patriotism shall be the supreme test and standard of American statesmanship. That standard can never be taken away from us; the most elaborate and durable monuments may perish, but neither the forces of nature nor any fiendish crime of man can ever mar or mutilate a great example of public or private virtue. Our matchless obelisk stands proudly before us to-day, and we hail it with the exultations of a united and glorious nation. It may or may not be proof against the cavils of critics, but nothing of human construction is proof against the casualties of time. The storms of winter must blow and beat upon it, the action of the elements must soil and discolor it, the lightnings of heaven may scar and blacken it, an earthquake may shake it, some mighty tornado or resistless cyclone may rend its massive blocks asunder and hurl the fragments to the ground, but the character which it commemorates and illustrates is secure; it will remain unchanged and unchangeable in all its consummate purity and splendor, and will more and more command the homage of succeeding ages in all the regions of the earth. God be praised, that character is ours forever!

WELL RECEIVED.

Long spoke from the clerk's desk in an expressive manner, and in a voice which, though not loud, was so clear as to reach every corner of the chamber. The eloquent passages of the speech were delivered with a fervor which elicited frequent bursts of applause, and as Long read the peroration the multitude broke into a storm of applause. On the right of the speaker were seated the chaplains of the senate and the house, and Rev. Mr. Willis, while on his left sat Hon. John W. Daniel of Virginia and Senator Sherman, chairman of the congressional joint commission.

As Long ceased the band struck up "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean." As the strains of the air ended Edmunds introduced Hon. John W. Daniel, who was greeted with long continued clapping of hands. Daniel proceeded to deliver his oration. Though having his manuscript on the desk before him, Mr. Daniel referred to it but once or twice during the course of his oration. He spoke in an easy manner, his voice being finely modulated to suit the meaning of his sentences, and his speech was accentuated and emphasized by graceful gestures. Many times he was interrupted by rounds of applause elicited by his clear cut and well balanced periods, and by his elegant style of lettering them. Mr. Daniel closed as follows:

PERORATION.

When Marathon had been fought and Greece kept free, each of the victorious generals voted himself to be first in honor, but all agreed that Miltiades was second. When the most memorable struggle for the rights of human nature of which time holds record was thus happily concluded, in the moment of their preservation, whoever else was second unanimous claim declared that Washington was first. Nor in that struggle alone does he stand foremost. In the name of the people of the United States, their president, their senators and their representatives, and their judges, do crown to-day, with the grandest crown that veneration has ever lifted to the brow of glory, him whom Virginia gave to America, whom America has given to the world and to the ages, and whom mankind, with universal suffrage, has proclaimed the foremost of founders of empire, the greatest whom liberty herself has anointed, as the first citizen in the great republic of humanity. Encompassed by the inviolate seas stands to-day the American republic, which he founded, a free Great Britain, uplifted above the powers and principalities of the earth, even as his monument is uplifted over roof and dome and spire of the multitudinous city. Long live the republic of Washington, respected by mankind, beloved of all its sons! Long may it be the asylum of the poor and oppressed, of all lands and religions! Long may it be the citadel of that liberty which writes beneath the eagle's folded wings, "We will sell to no man, we will deny to no man right and justice!" Long live the United States of America, filled with the free, magnanimous spirit, crowned by the wisdom, blessed by the moderation hovered over by the guardian angel—of Washington's example! May they be ever worthy in all things to be defended by the blood of the brave who know the rights of man! May they each be a column, and all together be under the constitution a perpetual temple of peace, unshadowed by a Cæsar's palace, at whose altar may freely commune all who seek the union of liberty and brotherhood! Long live our country! Oh, long, through the undying ages may it stand, far removed in fact as space from the Old World's feuds and follies, solitary and alone in its grandeur and its glory, itself the immortal monument of him whom Providence commissioned to teach man the power of truth, and to prove to the nations that their Redeemer liveth.

As he closed, Senators Edmunds and Sherman, Speaker Carlisle and Representative Long warmly congratulated him, while once more the audience testified their appreciation of the orator's eloquence.

After the benediction by the chaplain of the house the distinguished guests departed, and the speaker called the house to order. Adjourned till Monday.

The ceremonies were appropriately concluded by a fine display of fire works at night in the monument grounds. An immense crowd was present.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The senate resumed consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill.

At 1:40 a committee from the house of representatives appeared, and Dorsheimer, on behalf of the committee, read a formal announcement that the house was in session and awaited the coming of the senate in order to proceed with the ceremonies appointed to be held in the hall of the house.

The chair (Edmunds) informed the senate that the president of the United States was for the moment engaged in reviewing the procession, and that until the president arrived at the capitol the senate might continue business. Consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill was therefore continued. The senate retained in the bill, contrary to the recommendation of the appropriation committee, the legislative provisions inserted by the house, fixing the postage on newspapers sent from the office of publication to regular subscribers at one cent per pound but cut out the discrimination against sample copies, making the rate mentioned uniform for all newspapers sent from the office of publication, whether sample copies or otherwise.

At 2:15 the chair announced that the president of the United States was now ready to proceed to the house, where business had been suspended, and the senators, headed by Edmunds, president of the senate, and Secretary McCook, and preceded by Sergeant-at-arms Canaday, proceeded to the hall of the house.

At 5:05 P. M. the senate was again called to order, and on motion of Miller (N. Y.) adjourned to Monday next.

House.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The only proceedings in the house was the passage of a resolution notifying the senate that the house was prepared to receive the senate and proceed with the Washington monument exercises in the hall of the house.

CONGRESSIONAL NOTES.

THE SUNDRY CIVIL BILL.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The house committee on appropriations was in session at the capitol to-day from 10 A. M. till 7 P. M. on the sundry civil appropriation bill. The bill was completed and will be reported to the house to-morrow. It is understood that the only important item of new legislation in the bill is a provision to authorize the forwarding of standard silver dollars free of charge from sub-treasuries of the United States to such banks as call for them. The committee agreed to recommend an appropriation of $300,000 for the New Orleans exposition. This sum is to be expended under direction of the secretary of the treasury in paying off the present creditors of the exposition, in order of priority of lien under the state laws of Louisiana. The clause containing this appropriation and a clause agreed upon yesterday, to authorize the president in his discretion to suspend the coinage of silver dollars for one year from the 1st of July next, have not been incorporated in the regular appropriation bill, but will be submitted to the house by the committee as separate propositions, thus leaving it to the house to say whether or not they shall be added to the bill. It is the intention of the committee to move on Wednesday that the bill, minus these two clauses, be passed under suspension of the rules. The committee by an almost unanimous vote rejected a proposition to appropriate $100,000 to transport the government exhibits now at the New Orleans exposition to the inventors' exposition to be held in London this year.

A BLACK EYE FOR SILVER.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The house committee on appropriations this afternoon, by a vote of 8 against 7, decided to insert in the sundry civil appropriation bill a clause authorizing the president, in his discretion, to suspend the coinage of silver dollars for one year from the 1st of next July. By the same vote it was decided to offer a motion in the house next Wednesday—the first of the last six days' session—to pass, under suspension of the rules, the whole of the sundry civil bill except the aforesaid clause, and another motion—to be voted on under suspension of the rules—that the house shall then go into committee of the whole to consider that clause.

WHAT THE COAST SENATORS ARE DOING.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Senator Slater presented in the senate a petition of citizens of Oregon, asking for improvement of the Coquille river, and the appropriation of $100,000 therefor.

Senator Miller introduced an amendment to pay claims of California, and Dolph those of Oregon, against the United States for losses incurred in consequence of Indian hostilities. They cannot be added to appropriation bills, however, if the senate insists on its rule to stave off and keep out all new legislation on appropriation bills.

CONGRESSIONAL FORECAST.

An Extra Session not Considered Probable—The Appropriation Bills.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Randall, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, is of the opinion that there will be no extra session of congress. He says all the regular appropriation bills will be passed by the house before the end of this week. The naval bill will be called up for further discussion to-morrow, and after its passage consideration of the general deficiency bill will be asked. The appropriations committee will report the sundry civil bill to-morrow, and Randall will endeavor to secure its passage on Wednesday, under suspension of the rules.

The fortifications bill will probably be reported to the house by Thursday. It will be similar to the bill of last year, making provision simply for the repair and preservation of existing works.

An effort will be made by friends of the river and harbor bill to secure at least an hour each day for its consideration until completed.

During the last six days of the session, beginning next Wednesday, motions to suspend the rules will be in order at any time when the house is not in committee of the whole, or engaged on unfinished business, but in view of the large amount of work yet to be done on the appropriation bills, and the possible consideration of the silver coinage question, there is not much probability that many opportunities will be presented for taking advantage of this privilege during the week.

IN THE SENATE.

The senate has under consideration the postoffice appropriation bill, and it is expected action will be reached to-morrow. A sub-committee of the senate committee on appropriations was in session all day Saturday, upon the legislative appropriation bill, and this measure will probably be ready for consideration in the senate as soon as the postoffice bill is disposed of. It is expected that the Pacific railroad bills and the anti-silver coinage bill will be brought up during the week whenever an opportunity occurs after the morning hour. The senate is keeping fully up with the house in its work on the general appropriation bills, and if those remaining are promptly sent over, and contain no extraneous matter except such as the senate can approve, the work of the session will be brought to an end at noon on the 4th of March.

The military academy bill has become a law, and the district of Columbia and consular and diplomatic appropriation bills await the president's signature. The army, Indian, agricultural and pension bills have passed both houses and are in the hands of conference committees.

EASTERN NEWS ITEMS.

SPORTING NOTES FROM NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 22.—George Rooke and Charles Lange met in Sportsmen park to-day in a glove fight to a finish. Jere Dunn was referee. Three thousand people were present. Rooke opened the fight with some maneuvers but was stopped by Lange, who made a rush and forced half-arm fighting. Rooke was knocked down, but responded before the ten seconds were up. At the end of the second round, which was characterized by fierce slugging, both men were against the ropes near the center stake. When separated it was found that Lange had broken a bone in his right hand by striking the stake. Being unable to continue, Rooke was declared winner.

A match shoot took place between Captain Bogardus and Dr. Carver; 200 doubles, Louisiana Gun Club rules, and 300 singles, go-as-you-please, against time, this afternoon, but the lateness of the hour prevented completion. One hundred doubles were shot, resulting in favor of Carver, who killed 108 to Bogardus' 100. The match will be concluded Tuesday.

CLEARING-HOUSE RETURNS.

BOSTON, Feb. 22.—A statement compiled from special dispatches to the Boston Post, from the managers of leading clearing houses in the United States, gives clearances for the week ending February 21, 1885, showing the percentages of decrease, compared with the corresponding week last year. Totals, $670,701,336, a decrease of 20.1 per cent; outside of New York, $201,727,410, a decrease of 3.4 per cent.

SUDDEN DEATH.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—Francis S. Drake, a well-known literary man of Boston, who came here with the Boston light guards to attend the dedication ceremonies, dropped dead in the Tremont house to-night. Drake was a member of the light guards in 1848, when their corps escorted Winthrop to this city on the occasion of laying the corner stone of the monument.

CLEVELAND'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

ALBANY, Feb. 22.—Cleveland's inaugural address is nearly completed, needing only a few touches to make it so. It will be short, not over 1200 to 1500 words, and will clearly define the position of the president in public matters. Colonel Lamont is nearly well again, and will resume his duties as private secretary next week.

Details of a Terrible Tragedy in Texas.

FEARFUL FIGHT ON A TRAIN.

A Marshal, Two Desperadoes and a Woman Killed—Meetings of Dynamiters at Chicago and Baltimore—Etc.

GALVESTON, Tex., Feb. 22.—Nothing except meager details of the killing of United States Marshal Hal Gosling were received until too late to be available last night. The News' San Antonio special gives the following details of the tragedy: Marshal Gosling, accompanied by two of his trusted deputies, J. F. Manning and J. L. Loving, was conveying two United States prisoners from Austin to San Antonio for safe-keeping. The prisoners were James Pitts and Charles Yeager, who have won notoriety in Lampasas and Burnet counties as highwaymen and postoffice robbers. The officers and their prisoners occupied seats in the smoking car, on opposite sides of the coach. The prisoners were securely handcuffed together. They were accompanied by Mrs. E. A. Drown, grandmother of Pitts, and Miss Rosa Yeager, sister of one of the prisoners. The women occupied seats immediately in front of the prisoners, who in turn were escorted by four men occupying seats removed from them. The smoking car was well filled with passengers. When the train pulled out at San Marcos, two men left the smoker, carrying with them a leather valise into the second-class coach adjoining. After a short time they returned to the smoker, and occupied the same seats, immediately in front of the prisoners. This maneuvre attracted the attention of Marshal Gosling and deputies, who eyed the prisoners closely, until they became satisfied that all was well. The prisoners and women were affectionate in their demonstration, but no more so than they had been before the maneuvre mentioned.

DESPERATE FIGHT FOR LIBERTY.

The first intimation that anything wrong was going on was the sharp report of a pistol. This was followed by a rapid discharge of shots which filled the coach with a dense smoke, in the rifts of which the prisoners were noticed to be moving toward the opposite side, where seats were occupied by Gosling and his deputies. The first shot evidently missed the marshal. He was in the act of drawing a pistol, and while rising to his feet a second shot rent the air, and simultaneously with the crack of the gun the gallant marshal fell forward, with his head into the aisle and his weapon drawn, pinioning Deputy Manning for a time to his seat. Before the deputy could free himself from the body of his chief he received a ball in the neck and one in the shoulder. Clearing the seats, Manning took a position in front of the door, to prevent escape of prisoners by that exit. After he had fired every shot in his pistol he deliberately drew a pencil and began to remove the exploded shells from his six-shooter, while the prisoners were peppering away at him.

Deputy Loving backed to the rear door of the car, firing whenever a glimpse of the prisoners was to be had through the smoke. The prisoners rushed on to the rear, forcing Loving to the platform of the sleeper, when the deputy fired the last shot as the desperadoes jumped from the train. The train was in full motion. As they struck the ground Colonel Mayfield of Helena, Carnes county, who was in the end of the first-class coach, fired a well-directed shot at the prisoners, as did Conductor George A. Fowler, who was attracted by the smoke to the firing.

A SCENE OF CONFUSION.

The prisoners made off in a northerly direction, up a lane four miles north of New Braunfels. Pitts is presumed to be wounded, as Yeager was almost dragging him when they were last seen in the lane.

The train, after a delay of three or four seconds, was stopped. All was confusion. The coach was filled with the smell of blood and powder fumes. Investigation revealed that Marshal Gosling was dead, lying on his face on the seat occupied by him before the firing. The fatal ball took effect in the rear of the head, burying itself in the brain just back of the forehead. Mrs. Drown, Pitts' grandmother, was lying near, almost dead, shot in the stomach, and in great agony. Miss Yeager, sister of one of the prisoners, was found in an unconscious state in the seat recently occupied by the prisoners, shot through the leg below the knee. Deputy Marshal Manning was powder-burnt in the face and shot in the neck and shoulder.

Two shots had gone through the first-class coach, one of which grazed the head of a lady who was thrown into a swoon. The rear of the smoker was riddled with bullets. The train stopped within 400 yards of the lane through which the prisoners were fleeing. The deputy marshals had reloaded their six shooters by this time, when Loving was called to the assistance of Conductor Fowler, who had the four men mentioned under arrest, while Manning started in pursuit of the desperadoes. His strength, however, failed him, from loss of blood, and he was taken aboard the train, which pulled out for New Braunfels, where the wounded woman and four prisoners were disembarked and lodged in jail. The remains of Marshal Gosling, accompanied by Deputy Manning, were taken to San Antonio. The wounds of Manning are serious, but not necessarily fatal.

THE TRAGEDY COMPLETE.

Posses have left Austin and San Antonio for the scene of the tragedy, to aid in the capture of the desperadoes, while Deputy Loving organized a party at New Braunfels last night, and instantly started in pursuit, which found the dead body of Pitts a short distance up the lane from the scene of the tragedy and came upon Yeager, eight miles distant, who gave fight and was pierced by three balls fired by the posse, and disabled. He was taken to New Braunfels, where he died. The four men under arrest are confederates of the dead desperadoes.

Mrs. Drown, grandmother of Pitts, died at 3 A. M. in jail at New Braunfels, in great agony. Pitts was wounded in four different places, three of which were mortal. They, at the request of Mrs. Drown, were buried side by side to-day. Miss Rosa Yeager, together with the wife of Pitts, and the wife of her brother, are incarcerated in the second story of the jail, while the male confederates are incarcerated in lower cells of the jail at New Braunfels, where they will be held until talk of lynching subsides.

Deputy Manning, who made the gallant fight against the desperadoes, is lying in a precarious condition. Marshal Gosling will be buried to-morrow at San Antonio, with military and civic honors.

THE DYNAMITERS.

A Fiery Speech Made by a Woman—Chicago the Head Center.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—The dynamiters' section of the socialists held a meeting this afternoon in a hall very near the heart of the fashionable portion of the south division of the city. A number of highly incendiary speeches, in English and German, were delivered by A. R. Parsons, his wife, George Mitzinger, August Fehling and others. Mrs. Parsons made an unusually fiery speech. She began by berating her hearers as cowards and unworthy of the name of manhood, because they allowed aggressions of capital to continue; allowed their daughters to barter their virtue for bread. If they were men, as they claimed to be, she said they would blow up every house in the adjoining avenue before they would submit to it; would demolish the police stations, the court house and jails, and fling dynamite in the faces of the army and navy. If they were afraid to do this, however, they need not lack for a captain, for she would either apron with dynamite and lead them along the avenues of the city where the rich reside, destroying as they went. Her husband advised his hearers to study chemistry and take lessons from those expert in the manufacture of deadly explosives.

CHICAGO THE HEAD CENTER.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—Captain Mack, an inventor, says in an interview, that Cunning, now in prison in London for the attempt to blow up London tower, was in Chicago two years ago, with two other men, named Dalton and Bremer, and they had two infernal machines, one to blow up a ship after it got into the seas and was rolling, by the swinging of an iron ball, and the other for private assassination, in the shape of a bottle or decanter, which would explode on being set down hastily. Mack says when Cunningham was here he received a telegram from O'Donovan Rossa, and the three at once left for New York. Mack asserts that Chicago is head center for fenianism outside of New York; that there are three pronounced dynamite societies here, backed by plenty of money from rich Irishmen who are not suspected of any such tendencies, and that there are Chicago men now abroad on dynamite missions. He believes dynamiters are now hatching most desperate schemes, and intimates that their next move may be on Canada, or on Canadian vessels in this port.

HERR MOST SPEAKS.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 22.—Herr Most spoke in Turn halle to-night, to a full house. In the course of his remarks he eulogized Reinsdorf, hanged for attempting to take the life of the emperor of Germany, and justified murder and dynamite. August Schweible, a socialist speaker, protested against the sentiments of Most, whom he called a coward. A scene of confusion ensued, and the audience, composed of anarchists and socialists, seemed prepared for a row but quiet was restored, and Most and Schweible were taken in charge by friends. Most told a reporter that Schweible had been sent from New York to create a disturbance at the meeting. Schweible denies the accusation.

HARE'S STATEMENT.

He Blames the Majority for the Failure to Elect a Senator.

SALEM, Feb. 22.—Trains departing last night carried away the bulk of the "floating population" which has filled the town for the last six weeks, and only a few laggards remain. Among them is Senator W. D. Hare, with whom I had a talk to-night regarding his action during the past few days, and particularly his absence from "joint convention" yesterday afternoon. "My course," said Mr. Hare, "was based upon broad public grounds. It was a consistent course, and I have nothing to say in apology for it. I told Mr. Hirsch thirty days ago that I would never support him. Others did the same, and he knew and has known all along that fifteen men would not vote for him, no matter what the emergency. We opposed him because we thought him the representative of corporate interests on one hand, and of a political ring on the other, and on the ground that, personally, his election was not desired by the people. For myself I did not expect to be elected, and never intended or desired to be a candidate. Myself and colleagues, from Washington county came here hoping for the election of Williams, and intending to support him, but we feared to vote for him during the early days of the contest, because it might hurt rather than aid him. One thing I was determined upon, and that was to vote for no man who would not be a representative of the producing classes. The interests of corporations I thought sufficiently cared for by Mr. Dolph. When Tee moved for a recess Friday night I opposed it, because I feared it was a job to sell out to Failing or Corbett, whom I objected to as national bank men, and the representatives of corporate power and plans. I went into conference yesterday afternoon with the others who are of my way of thinking. Hirsch made a speech, withdrawing from the contest, but declaring that he did it with the understanding that all others who had been voted for should be left out. To this we acceded. Simon named Corbett, whom it was well known we would not support. Williams named Judge Stott, Richard Williams, J. W. McConnell, C. W. Fulton, Thomas Cornelius and E. B. Watson, but Hirsch and Simon opposed, Simon declaring angrily that he would not vote for Stott. They insisted upon Corbett, and pushed the vote on his name over our protest. I did not recognize the right of Hirsch and Simon to direct in this matter, and so withdrew. The whole matter was a farce. I did not propose to go into joint convention till the matter was settled, and did not go. I was willing to vote for Judge Williams, Weir, Hill, George, McBride—any one of the gentlemen I have named—or any other man of prominence and character, but I did not intend to be forced into aiding in the election of either Hirsch, Failing or Corbett. My action was upon my judgment of what was right, and it was in the interest of the future life of the republican party in this state."

Mr. Hare said much more in condemnation of the legislative course of Hirsch, who, he declared, by his vote on the Hoult railroad bill violated the pledge of the republican party to the people in its last platform. He states that himself, Davenport and others had talked over a proposition to explain their course in a public letter, and that they would probably do so soon.

GOVERNOR MOODY.

What he Says in Regard to the Appointment of a Senator.

SALEM, Feb. 22.—Governor Moody said to-day that he thought he had a right to be indignant at being placed in a doubtful and perplexing position, through the neglect of the legislature to do its duty. He had not yet carefully examined the law, and so had not definitely determined what his duty in this emergency was but he added: "I think that I shall appoint. This much, however, is certain; I shall not appoint a senator till there is a vacancy, which does not occur till the 4th of March. It would be impossible for any man whom I could name at that time to arrive in Washington to attend the short executive session; so, unless the new president calls an extra session, there will be no need of a senator till December. I shall be in no haste to fill the vacancy.

CRIMINAL CALENDAR.

MURDERED FOR HIS MONEY.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Isaac H. Radford, a real estate agent of this city, left here five weeks ago to transact important business. Saturday last he arrived in Tucker's hotel in Buffalo with $27,000, the result of transactions in New York. While in Buffalo he negotiated a draft for $10,000, making $37,000 in all. Thursday night he left Buffalo for Victoria, Ontario, where he owned some lots. Friday forenoon his overcoat was found in a rowboat at the Ferry house dock, Grand Island. This afternoon Mrs. Radford received a telegram from the magistrate at Fort Erie, as follows: "There are evidences of foul play on Radford. Send a detective to take charge of the effects. Charles Fry, a cousin of Mrs. Radford, and others, with officers, left for Buffalo this afternoon. Nothing as yet has been heard from them, but his friends here think he must have met with foul play, after having been shadowed by persons who knew of his transactions from the time he left New York. Radford never touched liquor, and was very powerful. He was daring and fearless.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Charles E. Fry and W. B. Shaw of Toronto, arrived in the city last evening and engaged the services of detectives to hunt up Isaac H. Radford of Toronto. They confirm the story that he had $37,000 on his person, and was in the habit of carrying large sums of money. He was a real estate dealer of Toronto, and on his way home from New York. It is known now for a fact that he left Victoria, Ontario, in a row boat for Black Rock late Thursday evening. It is thought he was drowned.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 22.—Deputy Postmaster Horace B. Terren, of Batavia, New York, this morning retired to a shed back of his residence and killed himself. He was dead when found. A shortage in his accounts aggregates $2000, and is regarded as the cause of his death. He was in the postal service nearly all his life.

NOTABLE DEAD.

GOING BACK TO THE OLD SOD.

BOSTON, Feb. 22.—The remains of the Irish patriot and preacher, Rev. D. W. Cahills, which, for more than twenty years, rested in Holyhood cemetery, near Brookline, were this morning borne to Brookline, preparatory to removal to Ireland in accordance with the last wishes of the dead priest.

General Buller Attacks and Defeats the Rebels.

RUMORED LOSS OF A TROOP SHIP.

The Trouble between Russia and England—Gladstone in an Unenviable Position—Nihilist Documents Seized—Etc.

KORTI, Feb. 22.—A dispatch from Abu Klea says: "General Buller, who arrived here the 15th from Gubat, commenced at noon the 15th systematic shelling of the Arab lines. Two well directed shots did the enemy great damage, one exploding among a group engaged in placing a howitzer on the summit of a hill east of our fort, and the other removing the whole gun carriage. Lord Beresford also did the enemy great injury with Gardner guns. The honors of the day fell to Major Wardrop, who, with thirteen men, stole cautiously round the enemy's right and found that they had only a few hundred riflemen on the hills, and no reserve spearmen. Wardrop's men, keeping out of sight, sent volleys at a range of 800 yards on the enemy's flank. Leaving one man at this point, to continue firing, he took the twelve others, and quickly as possible pursued the same tactics at three successive hills, giving the Arabs an impression that fresh bodies of British troops were arriving. El Mahdi's forces became panic stricken, ceased firing and decamped toward Metemneh, taking their guns and dead, and wounded with them. A few Arab scouts only were left three miles off to watch movements. There has been no sign of the enemy since.

General Buller advances on Gakdul as soon as reinforcements arrive from Korti. The British loss during the engagement was four killed and twenty wounded."

RUMORED LOSS OF A TROOP SHIP.

A telegram from Dublin reports that a rumor prevailed in that city to-night that the troop ship Lydian Monarch, from Kingston to Suakim, had foundered in St. George's channel. There is intense excitement over the report. Terrific gales have prevailed in Scotland and Ireland the past few days. Steamers are detained, and great damage was done along the coast. In the interior many losses of life are reported.

OSMAN DIGMA.

A Suakim telegram says the arrival of British troops has alarmed Osman Digma, who is trying to gather a large force at Samai. Osman recently killed a messenger from Taka, bearing news that the mudir of Dongola, assisted by Shukrai tribes, had engaged in battle with Hadendowas, who had attacked friendly tribes supplying the English with grain. Two thousand Hadendowas are reported killed by the mudir and his allies.

GENERAL GRAHAM'S FORCES.

General Graham will have 8000 troops in Suakim by March 9. Those will include the Indian contingent.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Florence Nightingale, Lady Roseberry, Lady Rothschild, Mrs. Gladstone and other well-known ladies have formed a committee to raise funds to provide assistance and comfort for sick and wounded soldiers in the Soudan.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

The Boundary Contest Likely to Provoke War between the Two Countries.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—Advices from Sir Peter Lumsden, the British commissioner sent to co-operate with Russia in fixing the northern boundary of Afghanistan, show that he has not been wasting his time. During the unexplained absence of the Russian commissioner Sir Peter surveyed extensive tracts of territory in the north of Afghanistan, carefully noted strategic points, and extended British influence among the Afghans.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in summing up the situation, says: "Let but one adventurous Cossack come into collision with a single lawless Afghan at Penjdeh, whither the Russians are reported to be advancing, and there will ensue a struggle which Gladstone is anxious above all things to avert. It is almost certain that this threatened collision with Russia is the reason for the order to employ the English militia. Russia, on the other hand, alleges that the Afghans at Penjdeh menace the Russian advance post at Savakha, and that Russia is willing to consent to any frontier demarcation which will leave pasture lands and salt beds accessible to the Russians and Turcomans, and within Russian territory. This opposition would certainly leave the strategic line within Afghanistan, and many liberals therefore urge Gladstone to accept the proposal. All parties, however, are virtually agreed that Russia means to occupy Herat, and that if balked in that intention the breaking out of a war between Russia and England is only a question of time. The British influence with Afghanistan is strong at present, and it is feared the Afghans will presume upon British friendship to the extent of forcing a conflict with Russia, in which Great Britain would be compelled to take part. If the situation does not improve, the guards will probably be ordered to Bombay instead of Suakim, and it is not to be expected that Russia would ignore such a challenge as would thus be implied. Most Englishmen are satisfied that Lord Dufferin, viceroy of India, is equal to any emergency, and the war feeling of the Jingoes is already beginning to be diverted from the false prophet to the Russian bear."

POOR OLD GLADSTONE.

Broken in Health, he Finds his Former Allies Deserting him.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The Herald's London cable special says: When, at the opening of parliament, the queen's message was read by the speaker, all members but one uncovered and there was complete silence. The notable exception was William O'Brien, who alone sat upright and defiant with his hat on. Gladstone's bitterest enemy would have felt deep sympathy for the baffled premier had he seen the dejected look and wearied air which the veteran politician wore when he left the house and took a short rest in the library. It is small wonder that he resumed his seat on Friday, after his important statement with a solitary cheer. Had he not read in the afternoon's Pall Mall Gazette, lately his warmest newspaper ally, this sentiment beginning its leader: "Painful to the last degree was the humiliating and discreditable performance to which the prime minister treated the house of commons. It was sad to witness this dismal and even tragical ending to so great a career. His once glorious sun is now setting fast behind a black and lurid cloud, a gloomy and awful contrast to the splendors of the new day, the dawn of which was so fondly hailed in 1880." And worst of all had Gladstone not been bluntly told by Sir Andrew Clark, his physician, as the Herald correspondent knows to be a fact, "You must at once leave office or die." His health has long been as critical as that of the pope or the Kaiser, and, if the truth must be known, that of the queen also. The debate to-morrow will, it is predicted, distinctly show much generosity toward their fallen foe from the tories.

RUSSIA.

SEIZURE OF NIHILIST DOCUMENTS.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 22.—The police at Dorpat, in the southern Russian province of Livonia, recently made an important seizure of nihilist documents. They include several thousand copies of a terrorist manifesto, which had been printed on a secret press and put up in envelopes to be sent to branch organizations and various local and imperial officials. There were several letters which proved the complicity of a student named Pereloeff, who had formerly been charged with connection with nihilist plots, but had been amnestied by the government. A party of soldiers was sent to arrest Pereloeff. They found him at his lodgings, but as soon as they entered he snatched up a pistol and shot himself through the heart. In his rooms were found poison, weapons, money, and a quantity of dynamite. Many other arrests have also been made.

"Gentle as the Breeze of Evening."

This line of an old hymn is quite appropriate when applied to "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." "I don't like to take pills if I can avoid it," we often hear persons say, "because they constipate me so." Now the "Pellets" never do this. They are so gentle and mild that their effect is almost precisely similar to a natural movement of the bowels, and no unpleasant effects are left behind.

The Oregonian.

MONDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 23, 1885.

HOW IT CAME ABOUT.

Stress of hard times and propagation of foolish doctrines, together with high political pressure applied during a good many years from Multnomah county, have produced the remarkable result just witnessed at our state capital. It required no great attention to the course of the conflict in the legislature to discover what the conditions are that have created for the present, two republican parties in Oregon. It is the country against the city; it is the agricultural community, chiefly of the Willamette valley, against the larger business interests of the state including the railroads, banks, wholesale and commission trade, speculators, money lenders and the like, concentrated here. When the politicians of the city, and those understood to be in their interest or under their influence of the city undertook to push the election of a senator, the opposition forces in the country took a stand against them, resolved to have no senator unless one who should represent their views and wishes, and held to their purpose to the last. Hirsch's candidacy became a struggle between city and country, though it would have been the same had the influences that supported Hirsch united in support of any other candidate supposed to represent the business and politics of Portland. A majority of the republicans having declared for Hirsch, he and his friends regarded the election as due to him by party usage, and held on under a belief that the others would come to him at last. Each section of the party misunderstood the other, and both were in fault. Under the belief that Hirsch could at last be elected, the effort for him continued till an unreasonable stubbornness was developed on both sides. His opponents, from their standpoint, could not possibly give up; his supporters, from their standpoint, could not permit a minority to rule. On the one side there was a determination to have no man who represented what was called the Portland interest, business and political; on the other a resolve not to yield to what was called the dictation of a minority. In the long controversy that ensued the members forgot to a great extent their representative character, and acted very much as if they supposed they were contending only upon personal differences. In such circumstances agreement was impossible. Had there been no democrats in the legislature the disagreement would have been even greater, for the only principle of concentration that operated at all upon the republicans was the result of the presence of the democrats and the fear that the election might be controlled through them.

The time was unpropitious for the presentation of any Portland candidate, and it was unwise to do it. Hirsch is a man of good business ability; he has activity, energy and force of character; he has rendered his party good service as an earnest republican, and his wish to go to the senate was a legitimate ambition. And yet, taking into account the circumstances of the time, including the state of the public mind through the rural districts towards Portland, both as to business and politics, and the fact that Portland has one senator already, it was a mistake on his part, as it was likewise on the part of other Portland men, to think of the candidacy. Every one, however, may be wise after the event. Possibly nothing less convincing than the proof secured through this demonstration would have shown clearly the nature and extent of the feeling throughout certain portions of our rural districts against what they conceive to be the wrongful attitude of Portland towards them. That this feeling is largely erroneous or even irrational, doesn't matter for the purposes of the present statement. True, it has been largely created by pestilent local demagogues like Judge Boise, and it is constantly inflamed by them. But what we have to note just now is the fact that it exists. There are doubtless some grounds for it on the business as there certainly are on the political side, of the complaint. Yet while it is true that Portland has never done so well for the country as it might, had there been a larger public spirit here, the idea that the country is being oppressed and impoverished by Portland is ridiculous, as is likewise the idea that any change whatever in the relations of the industry of the country to the business of Portland could be the result of the election of senators or representatives in congress.

But on the political side of the question it must be conceded that the complaint is more rational. Portland's influence over the politics as well as over the business affairs of the state, is necessarily large, and there can be no escape from it, no matter what party may be in the ascendant. It should be the part of the wise politician so to direct his power as to relieve the exercise of it as much as possible of the appearance of arbitrary and dictatorial methods. This has not been done with sufficient prudence and discretion. Admitting all that is due to Portland for her large republican majorities, which have again and again elected the candidates of the party, nevertheless the "forcing process" has been too apparent. In the legislature of 1882 it was scandalous; and many of the members from the rural counties professed to see in the late contest only a continuation of it. Multnomah county, having a larger population than any other, has the largest representation in the legislature, and though its delegation this time was divided upon the choice of senator, the fact was overlooked by members from the other counties. It was Portland once more "attempting to run everything."

As Portland's heavy vote gives it a large influence over the politics of the state, and as the heavy republican majority is here, the dissension that results from Portland's position falls only on the republican party. Under these conditions it does not touch the democratic party at all. But if the positions were reversed, if the democratic majority were in Portland and democratic politics were operated largely from here, as in that event they would be, that party would have this same difficulty on its hands, and the antagonism between the country and the city would be transferred to it, to plague and to distract it.

In the good old days the people of Oregon lived an easy life, had little and wanted nothing. They didn't think of going into debt, didn't care what the rate of interest on money might be, didn't trouble themselves about the rates of transportation, since they had nothing to be carried or no market to carry it to if they had. Portland was not, or was only a village. There was no wealth anywhere and one man's position was just the same as another's. But things have been changing greatly during the last dozen years, and many people don't understand the change, or know what to make of it. Some men, particularly in the chief town of the state, have made a good deal of money. There are bankers and brokers and general capitalists and wholesale merchants and railroad managers and—we suppose we may as well confess it—some very rich editors here. Portland is growing into a city which transacts the larger part of the business of the northwest. The changes that have come about have introduced a state of things to which many of our people are utter strangers. Not a few of them, both in the city and country, caught a while ago the speculative spirit of the times, and not knowing how to lay hold of the new conditions, got deeply into debt and have been stranded by the reflux of the tide. Farmers have attempted to grow wheat for market at an expense and upon a scale that the market will not justify. They have got into debt and borrowed money upon mortgage, and the output of their main product—wheat—has all the time met a falling market. The interest on the money they have borrowed has become a burden, taxes, in the straits they have reached, oppress them. They have come to believe the merchant, the banker, the wheat buyer, the money lender in league against them, and trying to control legislation for their further oppression. They suppose the poor bankrupt railroads of the state, which are not earning 2 per cent a year of operating expenses, on the money it would now actually cost to build them, are making great sums at the expense of the people. Meanwhile Portland has grown to some proportions, and Portland is the place where most business is done. To many it is inconceivable why a town like this should have grown up and they believe it has grown at the expense of the country. Never accustomed to anything of the kind, they do not regard it as the result of the natural laws of trade, but only look upon it as a phenomenon of extortion and oppression. The doctrine suits also those men of shiftless sort, with too much indolence or too little intelligence ever to succeed in anything, and they consider Judge Boise and his fellow apostles of the cause of unthrift as pre-eminent statesmen worthy to wear the laurels of championship of the people against all who engage in any of the [illegible] lines of business enterprise and push their efforts to success.

All this will wear out in course of time because it must. We shall reach here the conditions that exist in the older states. People will learn that in these matters there are no resources for them in legislation. The prudent, active and intelligent man will succeed; the indolent or stupid man will fail. Knowledge is power, and ever will be. The knowledge that is power includes perception by the individual of the conditions that surround him, their relations to each other and to himself, the tact to lay hold of things as well as to discern them, and the energy to work them to his will. Some men have this in large degree, others have it not at all. In most cases the presence or absence of it accounts for the view a man takes of the functions of government and the laws of business. The one man knows that he must take care of himself, the other believes that he is badly used by selfish and dishonest men, and expects government in some way to protect or take care of him.

This is not so much a digression as it may seem. It is, in fact, directly germane to what has happened during the session of the legislature just closed. The antagonism between country and city will gradually subside as we all come to understand better our natural and necessary relations to each other. Among those who refused to recognize the force of party usage in the election of senator there was beyond all question a conscientious purpose. Most of them did what they believed their constituents required. In the circumstances it was extremely injudicious to present any Portland candidate. Even if it be assumed that the opposition of the country was based on prejudice and error, the case is not altered, since wise men take note even of these things, and treat them with patience and respect. Looking at it from the country point of view, the opposition to the active direction of state politics from Portland is only what is always to be expected. Nor is it an unreasonable protest against methods which wise management would at least have softened or disguised. It will be better to have less political work done in Portland and less direction of the political affairs of the state from here. It will be well, perhaps, too for Multnomah county to give smaller and less sure republican majorities. The event at Salem probably will not wreck the republican party, but it is likely to give a subdued tone for a while to party effort.

THE GOVERNOR MAY APPOINT.

The constitution of the United States authorizes congress to make or alter regulations concerning the time and manner of holding elections for senators. Under this authority congress passed an act, approved July 25, 1866, which provides that "the legislature of each state, which shall be chosen next preceding the expiration of the time for which any senator was elected, shall on the second Tuesday after the meeting and organization thereof proceed to elect a senator in congress." Senators must therefore be chosen by the legislature which shall have been "chosen next preceding the expiration of the term," and McCrary, in his treatise on the American Laws of Elections, says, referring to Norwood's case (senate report No 10 42d congress), that "a person chosen as senator by any other legislature can have no right to the seat." It is often a perplexing question, McCrary says, "whether a statutory provision concerning the manner of conducting elections is mandatory or only directory," and he quotes with approval from the case of Jones vs The State (1 Kansas, 279) that "rules are only means," and that "to hold these rules all mandatory and essential to a valid election is to subordinate substance to form, the end to the means."

But since the election of senators is vested in the legislature, and the legislature "chosen next preceding the expiration of the term," is required to elect, the question arises whether the failure of the legislature to elect leaves a vacancy which the governor is authorized to fill. This question was discussed at great length in the senate in April, 1879, on the motion to admit Charles H Bell from New Hampshire who was appointed by the governor under peculiar circumstances. The term of Senator Wadleigh expired on the 3d of March, 1879. Under the new constitution of New Hampshire a legislature was chosen in November, 1878, for a term to begin in June 1879. That legislature had no power to elect a successor to Mr Wadleigh until June because, by the constitution of the state, its legislative powers did not begin until then. Its predecessor could not elect because it was not the legislature last chosen before the expiration of Mr Wadleigh's term. Under these circumstances the governor made the temporary appointment of Mr Bell on the 13th of March, 1879. The credentials of Mr Bell were referred to the committee on privileges and elections, from which two reports were submitted, the majority of the committee, six democrats, advising against his admission, and three republicans recommending that he be admitted. The majority relied chiefly upon the Lanman case of Connecticut, in which they contended that it was held that the constitution conferred upon the legislature, and upon it alone, the power to appoint a senator for the beginning of a new term. The minority on the other hand contended that there is no distinction indicated in the clause, "if a vacancy happen," between vacancies which happen when the term begins and vacancies which happen later.

McCrary says that the record of the Lanman case discloses no objection to the validity of the appointment other than the fact that it was made before the vacancy happened. The vacancy did not happen until March 4, 1825, yet the governor in anticipation of that vacancy appointed Mr Lanman February 9, 1825. In a foot note to the United States constitution in the Miscellaneous Laws of Oregon, the point decided by the refusal of the senate to admit Mr Lanman is stated thus: "It is not competent for the executive of a state, during the recess of the legislature, to appoint a senator to fill a vacancy which shall happen, but has not happened at the time of the appointment."

In the course of the discussion of a subsequent case in the senate,—that of Potter vs Robbins, this case was referred to as having been decided upon this ground. Mr Bibb of Kentucky said "the governor had thought fit to appoint Mr Lanman to a vacancy which would occur, not one which had occurred. This act was consequently declared void." Judge Story, in his comments on the constitution, taking the same view of the decision in the Lanman case, says "the senate, by a vote of 23 to 18, decided that the appointment could not be constitutionally made until after the vacancy had actually occurred. The vacancy did not actually occur until the expiration of the term for which the senator was elected, that is the 3d of March, 18[illegible]. According to Judge Story, then, a vacancy happens when a term expires, as well as when the incumbent dies or resigns. This was also the opinion of John Quincy Adams, who said in the debate in the senate in 1[illegible]7 on the Claiborne case, a vacancy happens when the office is not full, and that, he believed, was the meaning of the constitution, whether the vacancy occurred from casualty, the regular course of events, expiration of term, or other cause. In the same case, Roger B Taney, then attorney-general expressed the opinion that the term happen is equivalent to "happen to exist." He said "the constitution was formed for practical purposes, and a construction that defeats the very object of the grant of power cannot be a true one. It was the intention of the constitution that the offices created by law should always be full." Mr Bell was admitted by a vote of 35 to 28,—not a strict party vote, for Bayard, Gordon, Groome, Jones of Florida, McDonald, Randolph, Voorhees and other democrats voted with the majority while Conkling and Mat Carpenter voted in the negative.

While the Bell case is not strictly analogous to one which now interests the people of Oregon, the principle affirmed by his admission is directly applicable and pertinent, viz, that the vacancy need not be one, as by death or resignation happening during the term once filled by the legislature. In other words, the legislature having failed to elect a senator, and adjourned without day, a vacancy will happen on the 3d of March next during the recess of the legislature, and the executive of the state may make a temporary appointment until the next meeting of the legislature. This seems to us the most reasonable view to take of the question. It is consistent with the decided cases and with the spirit of the constitution. In vindicating the right of Mr Bell to admission Senator Bayard said that in the construction of the frame work of government substance, not technicality, should be followed, and that its great objects shall be kept in view. The men who framed the constitution had well founded apprehensions lest the government of the union should not be supplied by the voluntary elective action of the states. They knew it was in the power of the states to refuse to elect senators, and so the legislative powers of the union might be suspended. They could not, therefore be supposed to have designedly employed in the constitution language that was intended to prevent vacancies from being filled.

If Governor Moody is not authorized to make a temporary appointment until the next meeting of the legislature on the expiration of Senator Slater's term, the vacancy which will then happen must remain unfilled during the next senatorial term of six years. The next legislature cannot fill it, except by completing the work begun by the governor, for, as we have shown, the only legislature which has initiative power is the present one, the one which was chosen next preceding the expiration of Slater's term. If the elective power of the state has been exhausted by the failure of the legislature the office must continue vacant six years, and the state be deprived of the equal suffrage in the senate to which it is entitled by the constitution. It is plain that this legislature has exhausted its power to elect, for it did not continue to meet in joint convention until a senator was chosen, as required by law. The legislature next to be chosen cannot succeed to any power to elect except through the action of the executive in making a temporary appointment.

Some one has sent us a copy of a Bourbon paper printed at Corvallis, called the Benton Leader, which is indeed a miracle of stupidity. In an article more than a column long it rages against THE OREGONIAN, because this paper said that the Nicaragua treaty was defeated by senators from the states of the southern confederacy. We quote: "Every school boy knows the senate is largely republican, and that being the case, when any measure is lost the republicans are responsible for its defeat, they having a majority, and able to pass any measure in spite of all the opposition the democrats could bring to bear upon it. This is the most flagrant attempt at deception we have seen in any paper of the standing of THE OREGONIAN since the days of the last campaign when no bounds were put upon their foundationless utterances. The republicans are alone responsible for the defeat of the treaty and no one knows this better than the editor who wrote the above article." Did it ever occur to you, young man, that it might be profitable to read the constitution of the United States? Read it, and you will find that it takes a two-thirds vote of the senate to ratify a treaty. Though the republicans have a majority in the senate they have not a two-thirds, and though they gave for the treaty a majority they couldn't carry it, because the southern senators voted against it.

Whatever difference of opinion there may be as to the exclusion by the constitution of members of the legislature from candidacy for the United States senate, it has been sufficiently demonstrated by recent events that such candidacy is very much against public policy. It affects legislation injuriously in too many ways.

OVERLAND PASSENGERS

Passed Medford last night to arrive here this afternoon: J. E. Hayes, San Francisco.

BRIEF MENTION.

Social for young men at Y. M. C. A. to-night.

"Called Back" at the New Market theater to-night.

G. R. Kistler has been granted a divorce from his wife Anna.

The approach to the lower wharf at the foot of Ash street has been repaired.

The Washington Guard will parade to-day in honor of Washington's birthday.

The foundation is being laid for a new brick building on First street near Salmon.

The North Bend is now loading in San Francisco with freight for Gray's harbor.

The Janet McNeil is loading wheat at Mersey dock, where the Monmouthshire is also lying.

Ira Goodnough has been excused from serving as juror in the state circuit court until March 3.

Friday next has been fixed as the day for the trial trip of the new steamer Telephone, to Astoria.

Rev. Dr. J. Bloch lectures Wednesday evening at the Unitarian chapel on "Poverty as a Social Evil."

The ladies of the Hall street M. E. church at the Martha Washington tea party Friday night cleared $110.

The funeral of Mrs Isaac Barman took place yesterday from the residence on Stark street and was largely attended.

A large bill board has been erected on the south side of Jefferson street, extending from Front to Water street.

A public service in behalf of the Oregon Bible Society will be held in the Taylor street M. E. church next Sunday evening.

Solemn requiem mass for the repose of the soul of Rev. Father Thomas Duffy will be celebrated in the Cathedral at Vancouver Thursday.

The new directory of Portland is about completed, and distribution to regular subscribers will begin on Wednesday or Thursday of this week.

Special meeting of the W. C. T. U. this afternoon at 2:30 at the hall on Fifth street, between Washington and Alder. Let all members be present.

The old Columbia river tug Astoria has been purchased by W. C. Wood, at San Francisco, who has rebuilt her and will rig her into a schooner.

A subscription of $300 has been raised for the purpose of clearing out La Camas creek, in Washington territory and making it navigable for small boats.

Professor M. L. Pratt, principal of the public schools of Holladay's addition and Albina, has been appointed a deputy sheriff. The bad boys must look out now.

Two of the three newly elected pilot commissioners being residents of Astoria, the headquarters of the board will probably be at that place for the next two years at least.

The convention of ministers of the Portland district, Oregon M. E. conference, begins to-morrow at McMinnville. All the ministers of this city and East Portland will attend.

County Surveyor W. B. Marye goes to Latourelle Falls this week for the purpose of laying out a county road from that place to connect with what is known as The Dalles and Sandy road.

The father of C. E. Meach of this city died last Thursday at his home in Vermont, just after his son's return from the east, having left his father, as he supposed, on the high road to health.

A disease resembling distemper has appeared among horses near Philomath, Benton county, which has in many cases proved fatal. William Wyatt has been the greatest sufferer, losing twelve head.

Ten families, now residing in the town of Hawarden, Iowa, have concluded to move to Oregon, from representations made to them by one of their number who was here recently, and will start in a few days.

W. J. Quinn obtained a judgment in the state circuit court on Saturday against William Kane for $16, being the amount of the unpaid tailor bill of a man named Mitchell, for whom Mr. Kane in an evil hour became security.

The practice of serving beef tea in saloons at ten cents a cup has become so great owing to the increased demand, that it has induced the restaurants to take a similar departure. Several coffee houses now serve beef tea to those of their customers who desire it.

Complaint is made that a gang of hoodlum boys congregate nightly in a barn on the corner of Sixth and J streets to smoke and indulge in other vices. As there is hay stored on the premises there is liable to be a fire at any time, and the police should break up the rendezvous.

A considerable reduction has been made in the running expenses of the O. & C. railroad since it passed into the hands of a receiver. On the west-side road the two freight trains have been withdrawn and all freight is now carried in cars attached to the regular passenger trains.

A small unoccupied dwelling belonging to Mr. Delay of Vancouver, situate in the western portion of that town, was burned to the ground on last Friday. Loss, $800, origin, incendiary. The Vancouver fire department used their new Silsby steamer for the first time in active service, but were unable to save the property owing to scarcity of water.

"About the first unmistakable indication we have seen," says the Astorian, "that some preparation is being made for another salmon fishing season, was the landing on the O. R. & N. Co's dock, from the steamship Columbia, of a quantity of tin, twine and other cannery material consigned to the Cutting packing company and various other canneries.

IMPORTANT

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

GONE TO WASHINGTON.—A. Noltner, editor of the Standard, left yesterday for Washington to be present at the inauguration of President Cleveland. "That he is desirous of getting a good, liberal share of the democratic spoils during the next four years, and that he proposes to leave no stone unturned to this end, are undoubted facts," said a prominent city official, referring to Noltner's departure. "His objective point is the Portland postoffice and he believes that just such a recognition is due him for party services. He is prepared to take great credit upon himself when he reaches Washington for the failure of the Oregon legislature to return a senator, and will claim that the result is a great democratic victory, for which he has worked long and earnestly. Of course he is not the only man who wants the Portland postoffice, and, to quote the hackneyed phrase, 'Time alone will tell.'" Mr. Noltner intends visiting New Orleans before his return to Oregon.

ALL A PORTRAIT.—Those who visited the capital during the recent session of the legislature must have noticed a full length, life size oil painting of Washington hanging behind the president's desk in the senate. It is the property of Mr. A. Bush of Salem, and this is how he came in possession of it. Several years ago Mr. Charles H. Tilton of New York wrote to Mr. Bush, asking him whether he would like a good picture of Washington. Mr. Bush, supposing a bird's eye view of the city of Washington was meant, answered that he would be glad to have it, and in about six weeks later received a box, only a trifle smaller than those in which pianos are shipped, and a bill for $1500. It was more of a picture than he had bargained for, and not wishing to build a house to fit it, kept it unpacked for a long time. The painting is very handsome, and makes a fitting adornment for the walls of the upper house of the legislature.

BOTH BROTHERS IN LIMBO.—Ab. Lawrence, for threatening to kill his brother Ike, was tried in Redmond's court Saturday afternoon and held to answer before the grand jury in the sum of $100. Being unable to furnish bonds, the justice proceeded to make out a commitment to send him to jail. While he was doing this the incorrigible Ab struck the brother who had made the complaint against him a heavy blow in the mouth. For this breach of the peace Ab was sentenced to twenty-five days' imprisonment. Immediately after the trial Ike Lawrence was arrested by Constable Lichtenthaler of South Portland precinct, charged with the larceny of some clothing from a woman named McCoy. Consequently Ike, who still awaits a trial, spent Sunday in all in company with his brother Ab.

RESIGNED FROM THE POSTAL SERVICE.—Al. Hussey, railroad postal clerk, with the route from Portland to Corvallis, has tendered his resignation to the postoffice department, to take effect on the 1st of March. When Mr. Hussey retires from the service of the government it is his intention to go into the general merchandise business at McMinnville. One by one those officials, whose positions were gained while the star of the republican party was in the ascendency, bow to the inevitable and seek employment in the more humble branches of life as soon as the chance presents itself. There may be such a thing as civil service reform, but the average office-holder at the present time has as little faith in it as the patient, though long-expectant democrat who stands ready to take his place.

PRESENT STAGE OF THE RIVER.—An old river captain was remarking the other day upon the excellent stage of water in the Willamette at the present time, which has remained so for several weeks, varying only slightly and never reaching the usual low water mark at this season of the year. "It is something very unusual," said he, "and if it only keeps on like this for a while longer we won't need any dredger this year. The current will keep the channel clear, and if it don't the water is deep enough for vessels of the largest draught. Ships don't have to lighter at Astoria now, and that is a saving of no small sum. On the upper Willamette, too, boats can now reach Corvallis and without difficulty bring down full cargoes."

THEATERS AND DRUG STORES.—C. W. Cornelius, who came up from San Francisco recently, filled with a great scheme for the establishment of a new and thoroughly first-class theater in this city, seems to be spreading that idea all over the northwest, if one can judge from the following, taken from a Yakima paper: "Charles Cornelius, formerly of Cornelius Bros., wholesale druggists, Portland, latterly lessee of the New Market theater, and now associated with F. W. Stechhan, as lessee of the Standard theater, San Francisco, is here with a view to building a fine opera house, to be one of a chain in the Pacific coast circuit. He may also put in a stock of drugs.

WILL BE OCCUPIED IN MAY.—The new Esmond hotel, rebuilt and enlarged by the addition of a fourth story since the late fire, is now in the hands of the plasterers and will be ready for its opening, under the management of Thomas Guinean, by the first of May. The contract with the builders stipulates that it shall be ready to move into by the 15th of April, and at that time the furnishing of the new caravansary will begin. Much of the furniture will be purchased here, and the remainder Mr. Guinean is now engaged in buying in San Francisco.

STARK STREET FERRY.—The night ferry-boat James B. Stephens, which was put on for the first time Saturday, is duly appreciated by passengers, having excellent cabin accommodations. Henry Smith is engineer. The little craft works most satisfactorily to those who have her handling, and quicker trips are made at night than was possible with the big boat. This still makes trips occasionally until midnight, in order to transfer teams. The principal accommodation of the little launch, however, is that it runs regular trips all night until the big boat starts in the morning.

FIRST LYCEUM ENTERTAINMENT.—The musical and literary entertainment at Grace M. E. church next Wednesday evening promises to be of unusual excellence. Members of the Orchestral Union and some of Portland's best vocalists have kindly consented to lend their aid. The literary features of the programme will be meritorious. The proceeds are for the purchase of a piano for the church. The programme will be published in THE OREGONIAN Wednesday morning.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Yesterday Mrs. Albert Waddle (nee Etta Kindlaub) died of lung fever at the residence of her parents. She was married less than two weeks ago to Mr. Waddle, who is bookkeeper for Marx & Jorgensen. The lady will be remembered by many, who had no personal acquaintance with her, on account of her excellent piano playing at Y. M. C. A. and other concerts. Her sudden death, so young in life, is regretted by a large circle of friends.

EXHIBITS FOR NEW ORLEANS.—It has been decided by the Portland board of trade to send a carload of such material Oregon products as may be offered for exhibition at the New Orleans exhibition. Contributions are earnestly solicited of any and all material that is really meritorious for exhibit. Transportation will be free. Exhibitors must communicate at once with Charles H. Dodd, chairman of the committee. All goods must be marked.

IGNORANCE NO EXCUSE.—Charles Calahan, an old man from the vicinity of Sheridan, was on Saturday fined $10 in the U. S. district court for giving liquor to the lineal descendant of an aborigine. He paid his fine, and, as his plea before the court was that "he didn't know he oughtn't to do it," he returns home to-day a sadder and a wiser, as well as a poorer man.

LECTURE TO-NIGHT.—Rev. R. Orth will deliver a lecture this evening at Turn Halle on the subject "America and Catholicity," for the benefit of the poor, under the auspices of the St. Vincent De Paul Society. Before and after it instrumental and vocal music will be dispensed by the Benedictine Fathers of Mt. Angel, as well as by some of the best local talent.

TEN TONS OF FEED DAILY.—A. H. Johnson is now feeding 400 head of beef cattle on his Blalock farm. About ten tons of corn on the stalk are fed daily. He no longer looks upon feeding as an experiment, but as an unqualified success. Good fat beef will be very scarce after the severe winter, and these corn-fed cattle will bring the highest price.

MINISTERS' MEETING.—The ministerial association meets this morning at 10:30. Rev. E. T. Lee is appointed to read a paper on the increasing evil of divorce. As the election of officers takes place at the next succeeding meeting, further measures for increasing the efficiency of the association will be especially in place.

THE STAGE

THE TIVOLI.—"That Terrible Telegram" has "rung it on" at the Tivoli, and filled the house last night. Arrangements will be made this week for a down town office for the sale of reserved seats.

THE CASINO.—The second season of "Prince Methusalem" at the Casino closed last night to a big house. This evening "Donna Juanita," with Miss Winston in the dual role of Rene and Donna Juanita, and Miss King as Petrita.

One Man who does not Feel Discouraged over the Hard Times

Yesterday afternoon a reporter of this paper met a prominent business man out for a walk on North Fifteenth street, enjoying the bright sunshine and invigorating atmosphere. True to the fixed custom, the reporter asked "Anything new that can be used as a local?" As usual, the man hadn't heard anything worth mentioning, but said he knew something that might interest readers of THE OREGONIAN, and he proceeded to make a few remarks upon hard times. The gentleman came here a poor boy in 1852, indeed so poor that he walked from The Dalles to Portland, and had just six bits when he struck the town. He engaged in business, was thrifty, and the value of his property cannot be written with less than six figures. "What Oregon needs just now is to stop crying hard times. It only makes a bad matter worse. Money is close and everyone knows it, but we are in quite as good a condition as any other state in the union. You don't hear Chicago people or St. Paul people talk of hard times, and the papers there don't harp on the subject. Collections are slow back east, just as they are here, but people get along somehow or other until times improve. I suppose the reason everyone cuts here growls is because this is the first time in the history of the state that we have not been unusually prosperous.

"But what makes my blood boil is to hear some mossback or some very impatient man say that this country is going to the demnition bow-wows and that there is no future to Portland. I can easily understand how Virginia City and the state of Nevada went down, because there is only one uncertain industry and it became exhausted. This state is always going to raise wheat and wool and fruit and cattle, and you can't exhaust the the forests and coal mines and iron mines. And there is always going to be a demand for everything that Oregon produces, and the population is bound to grow larger. Wheat can't remain as low as it is now very long, and this year we will have an immense crop. All the snow that fell in eastern Oregon melted and went into the ground, and the young wheat has a hardy growth which nothing can stop now. It's the same in the Willamette valley. In fact, there isn't a single resource that has produced wealth in the past that will not continue to do so in future. This country isn't going to die and rot, but it will live and thrive, so what's the use of keeping up the growls?"

DEDICATION SERVICES

The dedication services of the First United Presbyterian church of Portland were held yesterday in their new chapel, corner of Sixth and Montgomery streets. In the morning an effective discourse appropriate to the occasion was delivered by Rev. S. G. Irvine, D. D., of Albany, from the text, "My house shall be called the house of prayer." In concluding the morning service, the pastor, Rev. William E. Stevenson, presented a brief statement of the work of the congregation since its organization, less than one year ago, and its present financial condition, showing that the chapel in its complete condition cost, exclusive of the furniture, $2147.55. Of this amount there remained yet unprovided for $897.50. To reduce this indebtedness an appeal was made to those present who sympathized with the efforts of the congregation to build a house of their own, and in response to the appeal the nice little sum of $213 was contributed.

In the evening Rev. T. J. Wilson of Halsey preached an impressive sermon from the 1st Cor., 3 chap., 11-15 verses. After which the pastor again stated the amount of money which was yet needed to liquidate the indebtedness, and expressed an earnest desire to see this amount raised before the dedication ceremonies should be concluded. A liberal response was again made and resulted in the reduction of the whole indebtedness to $128, which the pastor generously offered to hold himself responsible for thus releasing the church from all indebtedness. The pastor then offered the dedicatory prayer, after which with a song of praise the service was concluded.

The congregation was organized in April 1884, consisting at that time of eighteen members. Since then they have held services in the Lurline music hall, corner First and Clay, which, to accommodate the increasing attendance, has twice been enlarged, but has again proven to be too small, so that it is with great relief and satisfaction that they now move to a commodious church, which they can truthfully call their own. The chapel, which is an object of admiration, is semi-gothic in style, seventy-two feet in length, including rooms in the rear, and thirty-eight feet wide in front. There are, besides the audience-room (34x50 feet)—capable of seating 300 persons—a ladies' parlor below with a seating capacity of sixty to seventy-five, a class room in the lower opening from the gallery, and the infant class room and pastor's study—both situated in the rear of the main room. In addition to these rooms there is a well-furnished kitchen, with all conveniences for socials, etc.

The building is well lighted on the east side by two twin windows and one triple window, on the west gable by one large double and one single window and on the north front by one large double window—all the windows being furnished with cathedral glass. The Ladies' Aid Society have undertaken to furnish the chapel, and by their efforts all the rooms are beautifully carpeted, and gas fixtures, heater and chairs also provided.

At the thanksgiving meeting this evening a silk quilt will be awarded by the Ladies' Society to the lady who has succeeded in raising the most money for the church. Their report will be made at this time, and also the reports of the juvenile societies. Several of the ministers of other churches in the city are expected to be present.

LET RACE PREJUDICE DIE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I ask a small space in your columns for a few comments on the issues of the senatorial contest so needlessly and unfairly prolonged by the obstinacy and prejudice of a handful of members through the last few days. It seems to me that to attribute this course of action of the republican party minority to any ill-feeling between Portland and the country is but an attempt to put a gloss on an ugly fact and a fact very derogatory to the so-called liberality and enlightenment of our much vaunted Nineteenth century. Why has the opposition of these few been so determined and bitter that they were ready to sacrifice party unity, prosperity and precedent in their rancorous course?

What exception can be taken or is taken to the candidate who possessed the majority vote of his party? He is a man of standing and position, of unblemished moral character, upright and just in all relations of life, and the "acknowledged brains" of the republican party in every way fit to steer the helm amidst "troubled waters."

Why then will the party as a whole not stick to the recognized traditions of seemliness in party action, and acknowledge and consent to an election in due course? Why, and I repeat, why is this? An unnoticed witness of the contest in all its developments, I found everywhere the only fact brought to the front, the question of race animosity was at the root of the matter, a prejudice of the dark ages renewed to confront the needs of the living present, lending passion and almost personal violence to the struggle. I am a Christian, and I frankly confess myself ashamed of my race that the teachings for 1800 years of the doctrines of our master, who never condemned race or sect, man or woman, but had a large-souled mercy and love for all should have had such a poor effect on our lives and characters as to give point to such unseemly and rancorous proceedings as the last days have witnessed on the part of a small body of nighended men. Such actions but sow the seeds of discord for all time, and are as short-sighted as pernicious and unhandsome, and like the dragon's teeth, can only spring up and poison the atmosphere with warfare. I say the time for such a hateful feeling is over, and those whose motto is "Peace on earth and good will towards men" should stamp it out as a noxious growth unbefitting and unworthy of the moral and intellectual progress of our age. E. N.

FOR SCHOOL DIRECTOR

To George H. Chance—SIR: We the undersigned citizens and taxpayers of school district No. 1, believing that there should be a fully free [illegible] expression of the opinions of the voters of said district at the ensuing election, and that there should be chosen to the important office of school director one who while recognizing at all times the desirabilities of an economical [illegible] of affairs yet will labor earnestly to secure the maintenance of the full efficiency of our common schools as the foundation of our [illegible] [illegible] property and as an assurance of our future well being, respectfully request you to accept the office of school director of this district.

For the Benefit of Creditors

On Wednesday, at 10 A. M., E. Winebursch & Co., 120 First street, commence the sale of their stock of dry goods and clothing, for the benefit of their creditors. The goods will have to be sold without reserve, and great bargains can be expected.

NOTES FROM SEATTLE.

SEATTLE, Feb. 21.

The academy of Holy Names gave a petite fete which was well attended.

P. Meany of Astoria, father of S. [illegible] Meany, the architect, is here visiting his son and other friends.

J. G. Scurry has gone to Walla Walla as a witness in a lawsuit in which the Northern Pacific railroad company is defendant.

J. R. Metcalfe, a democratic lawyer of this city, left last Wednesday for Washington city, there to attend the inaugural exercises on the 4th of March.

The little steamer Wildwood lost her wheel while racing between Olympia and Seattle. The opposition steamer W. K. Merwin towed her to the wharf in this city.

The Evening Chronicle has changed editors. M. I. C. Montgomery, formerly of the Tacoma Ledger, succeeds Mr. S. G. Young, who will act as traveling agent and correspondent.

The Ladies' Relief Society has established a "Home" for orphans, and these good ladies are now very busily engaged in making the home one of comfort for the little unfortunates.

Mr. J. A. Baillargeon and Miss Abbie Collins, daughter of the Hon. John Collins, were married last Tuesday, and they immediately started for Portland, where they are now visiting friends.

Seattle has been abundantly supplied with amusements of late. The Grismer-Davies company and the Katie Putnam company have both given excellent entertainments to crowded houses.

The Seattle street railway company will soon begin the construction of their line along Front street. As soon as the planking of this street is completed it will be an easy matter to lay the rails for the street cars.

This evening the Young Men's Literary Lyceum will celebrate Washington's birthday with a carefully prepared programme of music and literature. The exercises to conclude with a drama, entitled "Defend the Flag."

David Gilmore, C. M. Johnson, J. P. Reynolds and John Doser have filed articles of incorporation with the county auditor. The object is to establish in this city the "Northwestern cracker factory." Capital stock is held at $30,000.

Old Yesler's hall is being repaired and thoroughly remodeled. A complete coating of paint and kalsomining, together with the new scenes, curtains and gas fixtures, has transformed what was a dismal "old barn" into a very neat little hall.

The revenue cutter Richard Rush sailed from here quite suddenly last week and left two members of her crew who had been ashore on leave of absence. Yesterday she returned for coal and the marines were very glad to get aboard their craft again.

Six hundred dollars' worth of opium was seized the other day by police officer Gardner. The smuggler had swindled a Victoria Chinaman out of the original cost, and the angry celestial was the cause of the seizure and also the arrest of the dishonest smuggler.

The Western Union telegraph company has extended its lines along the L. & P. S. railroad line, and now there is but two miles between the end and the Cascade division of the Northern Pacific. Both line and railroad will probably be extended in the near future.

The semi-annual examination of teachers of King county took place last week. Many of the aspirants were surprised and somewhat disappointed at the unusual difficulty of the questions. In grammar, especially, did their credit marks fall off. Two received first grade certificates, nine second grade and five third grade.

Mrs. Labounty has brought suit against S. Kirshberg, proprietor of a beer hall, and M. Drew, owner of the property, to recover damages to the amount of $1000. Her husband was injured while in a drunken brol, and she asserts that $1000 is the amount necessary to cover expenses and the wages he would have earned had the injury not been received.

At the city council meeting last evening it was resolved to give the city a thorough cleaning. Committees were instructed to abate nuisances and report to the council all instances where the health of the citizens is affected by the condition of the streets, sewers or pools. Seattle will be in a condition to stand the probable attack of the Asiatic cholera if these resolutions are carried into effect.

E. J. McCarty, for some time the general freight agent and accountant for the Columbia and Puget Sound Railroad Company, has resigned and has gone east to accept a position on the Kansas City, Fort Scott and Gulf railroad. Last Saturday evening the employes of the railroad and some particular friends of Mr. McCarty met at the Arlington hotel and tendered him a farewell banquet. Speeches, songs and toasts were combined in making the occasion one of pleasure to the departing gentleman. Mr. W. R. Thornell has been appointed to Mr. McCarty's position, and Mr. F. A. Bell has been promoted to Mr. Thornell's former office, viz. The Oregon Improvement Company's coal agent for Puget sound. These last two appointments are looked upon with approval by the interested citizens.

"CALLED BACK" TO-NIGHT

The Grismer-Davies company arrived from the Sound yesterday, after completing one of the most successful seasons ever played on that circuit. "Called Back," which is to be presented this evening at the New Market theater for the first time in this city, by Mr. Grismer, Miss Davies and their excellent company, has created a great sensation both in Victoria and Seattle where it was presented to crowded houses, and there is no doubt that this great drama will prove one of the most successful plays ever presented here, its success having been universal wherever produced, both in the United States and England.

From a letter received by business manager Morgenstern from Mr. W. B. Higgins of the Victoria Colonist, is taken the following concerning the Grismer company and "Called Back." * * "But the object of my writing is to tell you what a furore 'Called Back' has created in this city. Every one is loud in his praise of Mr. Grismer's and Miss Davies' acting in this powerful play, and to tell the truth every one I have met to-day has a good word for them and the company in general. I am sure if they ever return here, an even more hearty welcome will greet them than they had the last time."

The following is the cast:

Most of the cereals of eastern Oregon and Washington are sown in the fall, and the coming crop will include much from the summer fallowed ground. Letters being received here from that section tell of most excellent crop prospects and consequent good outlook for general business. By courtesy of Messrs. Staver & Walker, farm implement dealers, we are permitted to use extracts from letters received by them from correspondents, the following being of especial interest:

WALLA WALLA, Feb. 17.—Walla Walla county and the four attached townships of Umatilla county that properly belong to our trade has in, say, 125,000 acres, principally wheat, which, with 25,000 acres more to be sown in the spring in wheat, oats and barley, means a harvest 7,000,000 bushels; Umatilla county, excepting the four townships, has, say, 200,000 acres, or 5,000,000 bushels; Columbia county has, say, 75,000 acres, or 2,000,000 bushels, a total of 14,000,000 bushels, and probably more rather than less. The weather since last fall has been of the most favorable character, and so far everything points to a larger harvest by one half to two-thirds than ever before known; and as the crop is in on summer-fallow ground, by far the largest average per acre is promised.

GRANT'S, Or., Feb. 15.—I think the crop prospects were never better; the snow has about all gone and the ground was not frozen, so the water has gone into the ground. Farmers put in a large amount of wheat last fall, and it all looks good. We did not have any frosty nights, the weather is fine and the prospects never looked better.

PENDLETON, Feb. 16.—Crop prospects were never better than now. The heavy fall of snow all melting and running into the ground has placed the crops in fine condition. The acreage is one-third larger than two years ago, we think, and almost all, if not all, that will be threshed was sown last fall. There will be very little sown this spring. A large amount of summer fallow was sown last fall.

These extracts are a fair sample of the large number of letters received. Certainly the outlook at this time is excellent, and without later changes for the worse to crops, the business prospects are good. Farmers have been compelled to be close in money matters for the past year, and this will be a healthy influence next season. Some cereal growers are now asking advances against their next crops, but money is difficult to secure so far in advance of the harvest.

FREIGHTS.—The British iron bark Banca, 1090 tons, arrived in last evening to Meyer, Wilson & Co., with salt and other goods from Liverpool. She is on the discharge list. The British iron bark Kenton arrived in to-day under prior charter to the Portland flouring mills and will probably load flour. The Josepha, with a cargo, mostly cannery supplies, from Liverpool, is outside. She has a prior charter for grain outward. Report said the Monmouthshire would load wheat on owner's account, but her agents say that no business is as yet arranged. There is no inquiry for spot tonnage, owners and shippers remain apart in their views.

WHEAT.—Neglected and lower markets abroad continue the weak tone shown by American markets. With us the market exhibits nothing of new interest. Receipts are light and partly for San Francisco account. Buyers seldom go above $1 17½ as a bid, but holders have not made up their minds to accept this. Business is therefore very light. Walla Walla is in no trading here, the nominal quotation being $[illegible] last given. The John Nicholson has completed cargo, leaving the W. S. Brown, Montgomery Castle and Staghound as the loading fleet.

FLOUR.—Trade very quiet and wholly of a local character. Shipments to San Francisco are very fair, mostly of Walla Walla brands. Standards quoted at $4.

OATS.—Receipts past three days very light for [illegible] account. Offerings have decreased because of lower bids, and this may have the effect of easing the situation. Quote 30@32½c for good to choice feed.

POTATOES.—Market weak and lower under advices, and buyers pay less here. Quote 20@30c for Garnet Chile's and Burbanks. Late shipments have brought poor returns, and the disposition to operate is less free.

PROVISIONS.—While quotations are unchanged the market continues to be freely supplied and weak. More eastern received to-day.

ONIONS.—Only very choice can be moved to advantage. There are few buyers for shipment because of the weak feeling and danger of poor lots. The jobbing price is 2c.

TROPICAL FRUITS.—Good quality California oranges selling to-day at $2, and the market is improving. Others without change.

BUTTER.—California roll selling at 26@27c, as to grade. Local sorts plentiful, weak and irregular.

POULTRY.—Chickens in slack request at $3@3 50 for ordinary; choice hens probably $4. Ducks are inquired for and weak at $5@6. Geese and turkeys in no request.

EGGS.—Arrivals continue to sell up close at 15c and the undertone seems improving.

Markets by Telegraph.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKETS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21.—Weather, cloudy; wind northwest.

Receipts—Wheat, 72,500 ctls; flour, 2900 qr sacks; oats, 1100 ctls; potatoes, 1800 sks; barley, 2900 ctls.

Freights—The market continues inactive; very little inquiry and no business reported.

Wheat—The situation is unchanged, buyers not at all anxious; bids nominal; $1 25@1 27½ for No. 1 shipping; offerings on this market very small; futures, very little doing. No. 1 white sold at $1 27½@1 30 buyer the season.

Barley—Spot market firm at 90@95c; futures not so active and rather weaker; No. 1 feed, buyer season, 97½c; seller season, 92c.

Oats—The market is weak and quotably lower; choice Washington territory at 90c@$1 05.

Potatoes—The market is weak; large stocks of river on hand; Oregon consignments are largely of poor quality, quite good to choice 65@75c, poorer qualities 50@60c.

Bran—Steadily held at $11 50@13.

Butter—Weak at 30c for choice fresh roll.

Eggs—Weak; fresh California selling at 19@20c.

Onions—Small business doing; choice are scarce; Oregon consignments difficult to sell; quote 1 [illegible] for good lots.

Provisions—Unchanged.

EASTERN MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—Wheat opened at yesterday's closing prices, 83½@83⅝c May; 78¼c March. Pork, higher; $12 77½ March. Lard, higher; $6 97½ March; ribs, higher; $6 60@6 62½ March; dry ribs, steady; $6 70 cash.

Wheat ruled steady; closed 78c cash, 78⅛c February, [illegible] May.

ASSOCIATED PRESS MARKETS.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Governments, quiet. The stock market closed active to-day. Business was well distributed, and dealers report a good demand for all classes of securities, including some which have been neglected many months past and previously lower priced. Persistent and unchanging strength, with moderate transactions, was the feature of the afternoon's business. Gains over all early prices were not large, and the movement upward was somewhat erratic, and not a steady advance of the whole column; but at the close of the board prices were the best of the day and firm, higher ⅛ to 2½ per cent higher than at the same time yesterday.

MONEY, BONDS AND STOCKS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Money, 1@1½; closing at 1½. Prime paper, 4@5. Exchange bills, quoted at $4 84; demand, $4 86¼.

THE EAST SIDE.

SCHOOL REPORT, DISTRICT 31.

Following is the report of the North school, East Portland, Albina and Multnomah schools for the five months' term ending February 13, 1885: Number registered, 425; days' attendance, 35,770; days' absence, 3495; average number belonging, 418; average per cent. of attendance, 93.3; number cases of tardiness, 231; suspended, 1; cases corporal punishment, 57.

The term just closed has been one, I think, of prosperity for the school; at least, we as teachers have endeavored to make it such. Our number of cases of tardiness is larger than it should be, and we would call upon parents for their assistance in making a better record for coming term. M. L. PRATT, Principal.

Professor Pratt has been appointed deputy sheriff, principally for the purpose of protecting school property, several saloons being in the vicinity of the Albina school.

Miss Cora Packard, principal of the Albina school, has been absent from her position for a few days through sickness, the same being temporarily filled by Professor Pratt.

NOTES.

Mr. E. C. Wheeler is convalescent.

The next social of the Galaxy club will occur Wednesday evening.

Prof. Wetzell has recovered from his nervous attack and will resume his duties this morning.

The new sidewalk and fine weather attracted a large number of visitors to Lone Fir cemetery yesterday.

Prosecution not being ready Saturday, the case against Hong Hang of "conversion by trustee" in Justice Coleman's court was continued until this morning.

Lenten services will continue during the week at St. David's church. Classes for confirmation will be held during Lent, and Bishop Morris will administer the rite of confirmation in due season.

Interesting dedicatory services were held at the Seventh Day Adventist church yesterday morning, Elder H. W. Decker assisting the pastor, Elder C. L. Boyd. A large audience was present.

Mr. W. H. Mathieson, Dee Street, Invercargill, New Zealand, writes: "My apprentice took very ill with neuralgia, and became delirious. Several remedies were tried without effect; then he tried St. Jacobs Oil, and after one application got immediate relief."

Agreeable to Take.

No medicine is so agreeable to take as Henley's Celery, Beef and Iron; thousands drink it daily to keep themselves well and strong.

FAILED TO ELECT.

From The Sunday Oregonian.

SALEM, Feb. 21.—At 10 o'clock this morning both houses of the legislature were called to order. All republicans were present, and every democratic seat was vacant. For want of a quorum both houses adjourned to meet at 11:45. During the interval vain efforts were made for a general caucus, but republicans could not be got together. Although there was no regular conference there had been a good deal of individual whispering, and most of the members determined to answer the roll call, with scattering votes, or to sit silent in their seats when the ballot was called.

The scene when joint convention assembled was dismal to the last degree. Nearly half the chairs were unoccupied, the floor was littered an inch deep with the debris of yesterday's session, the manner of officers and members was anxious and constrained and the lobby, which was large, stood eagerly expectant and in unaccustomed silence.

The sixty-ninth ballot was called, and the votes were divided among twenty-nine different names, the highest receiving three. Nine members voted blank.

The afternoon was spent in anxious consultation in halls and corridors. Shortly past three the republicans assembled in the chamber of the president of the senate.

Hirsch made a speech in which he thanked his friends for their loyal support, and declaring his republican fealty unshaken and his purpose of standing by the party. With the statement that he would not stand in the way of party unity, Hirsch gracefully withdrew from the contest.

Simon proposed ex-Senator H. W. Corbett, and various other names were considered, and on ballot being taken Corbett received 28 to 19 against him. Most of the opposing 19 declared they would not vote for Corbett in joint convention.

The caucus rose, and as the time for re-convention in joint session had arrived, proceeded to the hall of representatives. The roll being called, only forty-five members were present, one less than a quorum. There was some delay in hope that laggards might come in, but it soon became evident that they were purposely absent with the design of breaking a quorum and preventing an election. At 20 minutes past 4 it was moved to adjourn till 7 to-night; lost. Again it was moved to adjourn till noon Monday; lost.

Simon then moved that joint convention do now dissolve, declaring that it was useless to wait longer for members who knew their duty but chose to violate it. He made this motion with regret and only upon the conviction that further effort was useless. It is due to Simon to say that his whole effort to-day has been to secure an election. In this matter as in all others during the session he has been the faithful and vigilant representative of his constituents. The motion of dissolution was carried and was greeted with yells of delight by the democrats in the lobby. The republicans who absented themselves and who thus defeated the election of a republican senator were Barnes and Bourne of Multnomah, Hare of Washington, Miller of Josephine, Voorhees of Marion and Cameron of Jackson. It is but fair to say that Miller was detained at home by the illness of his wife.

The dissatisfaction of the democratic members, most of whom remained quietly in the city during the day, over this unfortunate end is intense and hilarious. They consider that they have won a great victory, and within an hour after adjournment the telegraph office was gorged with messages of congratulation to Barnum, Thompson, Vilas, Cleveland and other democratic leaders.

The duty of the governor in this emergency is not clear. The law declares that he shall by executive appointment fill vacancies occasioned by "death or resignation." The present exigency is not specifically covered. It is the opinion of Judge Williams, however, that the governor has the right to appoint. The quorum of New Hampshire in a similar case a few years ago, appointed Bell to the senate and his title to the seat was confirmed. In any event a man appointed by Governor Moody would only hold till the meeting of the next legislature, two years hence.

Speculation as to who the governor will appoint, if he fills the vacancy, is scattering. The truth is that nobody knows aught about it.

There was a general clearing out for home at 7:30 to-night.

MR. BILYEU'S DEFENSE.

Bilyeu of Lane, who was reported in the OREGONIAN this morning as having attempted to assault Simon in the row in the senate last evening, disclaims any such purpose. He says that when his brother was addressing the president he was standing with his hands, by mere accident, in his pocket. As the crowd closed in, angrily, he rushed forward, with no other intent than to be on hand to defend his brother. He had no thought of attacking Simon or anybody else, and had not, in fact, a pistol in his possession. Nobody will question Mr. Bilyeu's entire truthfulness in this matter, but it must be said in defense of the reporter, that the appearances were as he presented them, and that all who saw Bilyeu's excited movement thought his purpose was to assault Simon.
